Re: Comments on draft programmatic EIS/EIR

Farmers in the delta have a number of specific concerns about Cal-Fed's proposals.

At the same time as it works to solve environmental problems in the region, Cal-Fed must also assure that it meets the needs of farmers, industries, and urban residents. Cal-Fed's solutions must bring more reliable water supplies and improved water quality-a particular concern for delta farmers.

The solutions must include significant new water storage. We can't meet the needs of both the environment and the rapidly increasing population without it.

Conservation alone cannot provide enough water to meet all our needs. The most important form of conservation we can use is to save excess water during wet years, collecting it in reservoirs for use when it's needed to meet environmental human needs during future droughts.

The cost of delta improvements must be shared fairly. The solutions must be planned in a way that benefits delta agriculture, and must include the necessary improvements to the levee system.

We recognize that new water development will require some land to be taken out of agricultural production. But Cal-Fed proposes to convert hundreds of thousands of acres of prime farmland with good water rights. Cal-Fed should stress voluntary-rather than confiscatory habitat-creation programs. California farmland is a global resource and its conversion must be minimized.

Cal-Fed must strengthen water rights and must not base its solutions on redirection of agricultural water and conversion of farmland.

Farmers want Cal-Fed to succeed, but we won't accept solutions that don't benefit agriculture in our region and statewide.

Sincerely,
